About the Rockland Boulders is an American professional baseball team based in Pomona, New York in the County of Rockland. It is a member of the Canadian American Association of Professional Baseball, also known as the Can-Am League. The "Boulders" name refers to Rockland County's plethora of boulders in its landscape. The team's primary color, blue, alludes to the former Brooklyn Dodgers, which held their spring training events at Bear Mountain State Park during the 1940's. The red honors the neighboring Rockland County Fire Training Center. Boulder Bird is the official team mascot. Go to their web site at: www.RocklandBoulders.com
